MEDICAL INNOVATION HANDLED WITH CARE

Highland Park Hospital is a place of blissful beginnings. For nearly 100 years, we have provided exceptional care for women and their families in Lake County and beyond. Highland Park Hospital combines the comfort and intimacy of a community hospital with a nationally ranked Women's Program. Patients have an extraordinary team in their corner—an esteemed and deeply-caring group of professionals dedicated to their well-being.

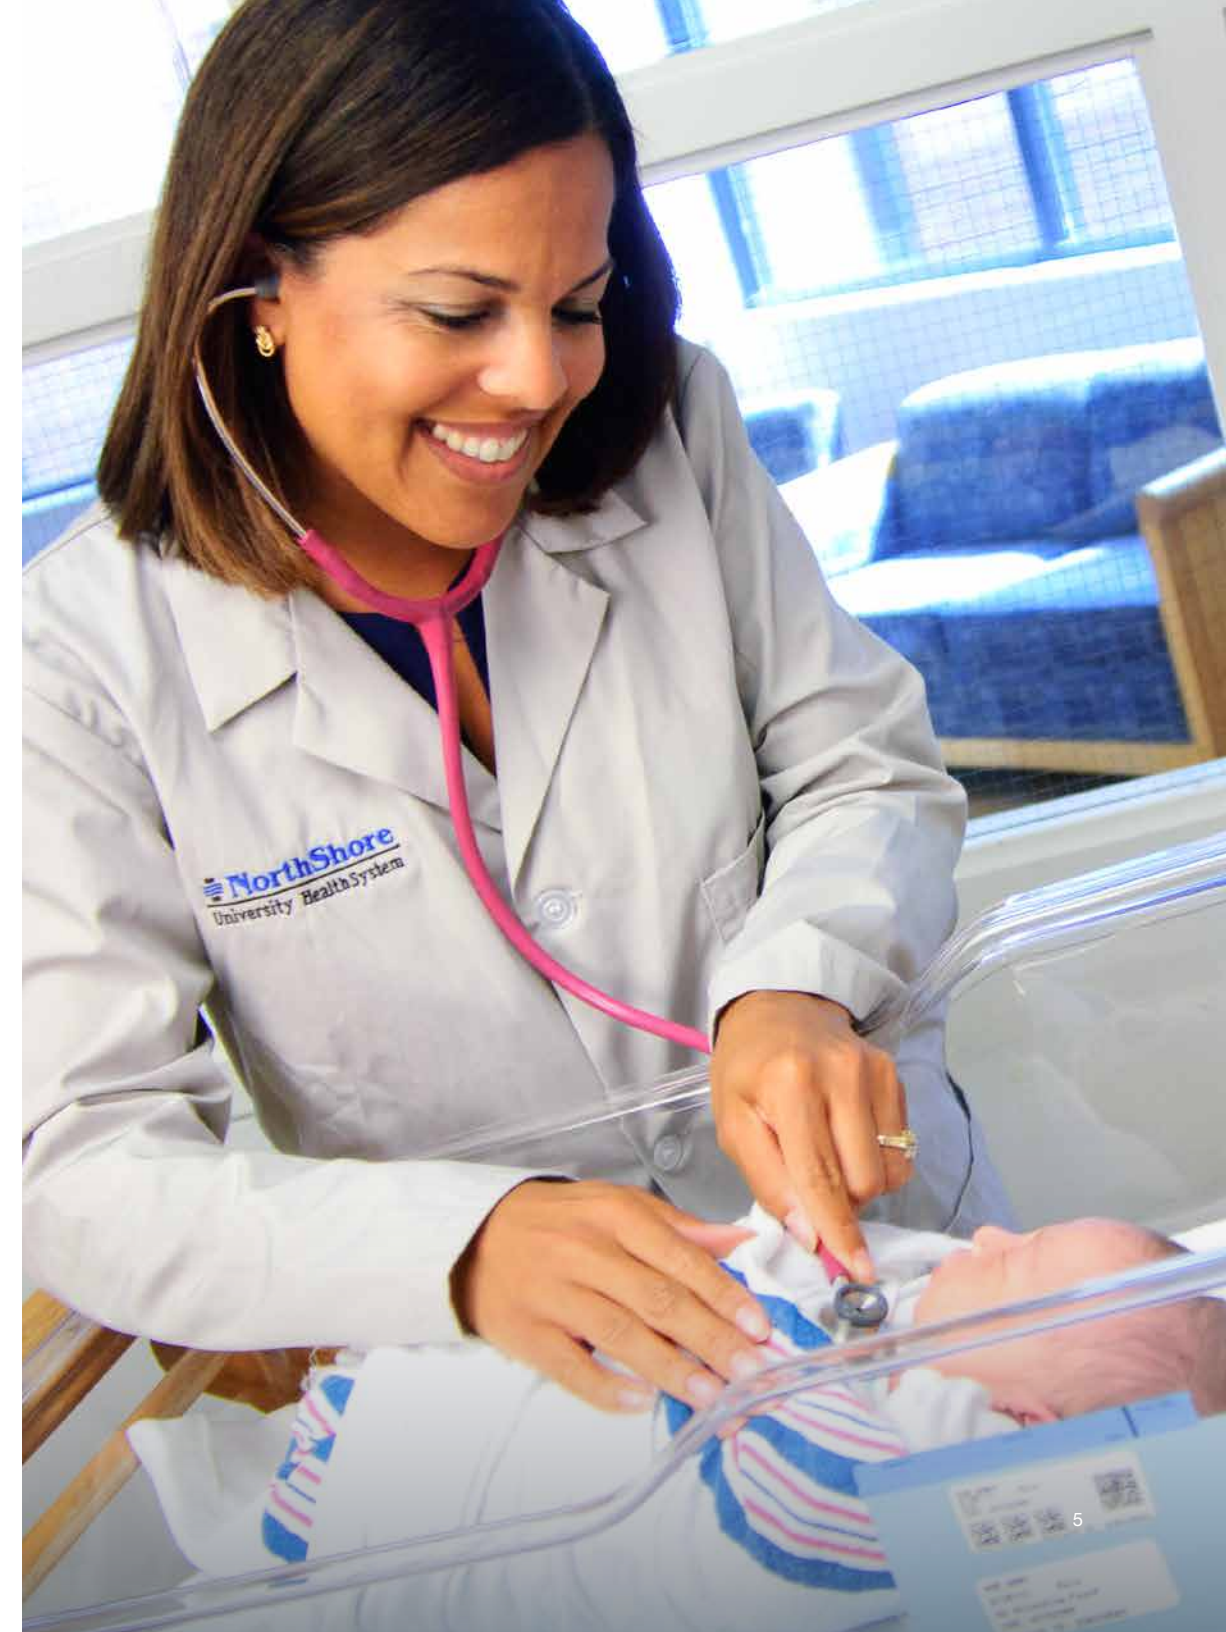

A warm welcome to the world

Each year, more than 1,300 newborns make their world debut at Highland Park Hospital, and we are proud to provide them the warmest welcome. Ours is among the only hospitals in the region to provide a Labor-Delivery-Recovery-Postpartum (LDRP) program.

The LDRP approach to childbirth is lauded among many leading OB/GYN practitioners. Unlike other birthing environments, LDRP mothers-to-be—and later, their infants—can remain in the same room with the same medical staff for the entirety of their stay. They are not moved from room to room, and they are reassured by the presence of familiar medical staff. This continuity of care is a primary benefit of the LDRP approach. Clear communication is enhanced, and the patient/caregiver relationship is nurtured.

LDRP rooms provide a comfortable, homelike atmosphere and are spacious to accommodate caregivers and equipment, as well as family and other visitors. With baby in the same room, mothers are better able to soothe newborns, and new parents gain greater confidence in their parenting skills. Roomy accommodations for dad and siblings make the LDRP experience more enjoyable for mother, baby and family.

Leading-edge medicine with a community-based approach to care

Edward Lee, MD, has delivered more than 1,500 babies at Highland Park Hospital, and the words “attentive, thoughtful and thorough” are used by patients and colleagues to describe him. He credits the excellent nursing staff and doctors who are involved “minute-to-minute, hour-to-hour.” Says Dr. Lee, “Patients have access to a wide range of premier subspecialty care—endocrinology, pediatric neonatology, high-risk obstetrics and more—just five minutes from home.”

Highland Park Hospital's LDRP program can result in smoother deliveries, and healthier and happier babies and mothers, when compared to traditional labor and delivery rooms.

Support network

In recognition of its clinical care, quality and educational efforts, NorthShore has received Magnet recognition and was the first health system in Illinois to receive this prestigious honor. The Magnet distinction commends NorthShore's excellence in nursing and high standards in patient care—achieved by only 6 percent of hospitals nationwide.

Highland Park Hospital's OB/GYN program provides a full spectrum of healthcare support to women—from straight-forward issues to the most complex—for those celebrating the birth of a child, battling ovarian cancer or grappling with postpartum depression.

Exemplary care is provided for all our patients, regardless of their ability to pay. A leading example of our commitment to care is our Perinatal Depression Program that identifies and supports women at risk for depression during and after giving birth. Treatment is offered free of charge and is tailored to the needs of each patient.

Highland Park Hospital's gynecologic oncology team provides comprehensive and compassionate care for patients while also pursuing clinical research that will benefit patients, the community and beyond.

Education is fundamental to our work as well. In partnership with the University of Chicago Pritzker School of Medicine, Highland Park Hospital provides medical residents and fellows in family medicine with comprehensive training and instruction in women's and pediatric care.

With skill and compassion, our clinicians help women surmount breastfeeding obstacles, manage high-risk pregnancies, overcome infertility and much more. NorthShore University Health System's leading-edge research drives practical applications in clinical care so we can deliver the most successful and promising treatment.

“Our team of superior doctors, nurses and technicians focuses on collaboration across all our women's health disciplines. By creating an environment where best practice is readily shared, we provide leading-edge care and treatment for our patients. Simultaneously, NorthShore's clinical research supports new innovations in care, and our multidisciplinary teams foster professional development in each other.”

NEARLY A CENTURY OF TRUSTED CARE

Highland Park Hospital opened its doors in 1918. Our pre-eminent birth center and maternity ward welcomed patients from the very beginning. This focus on building healthy families is part of our legacy—fundamental to our vision, our promise to provide multigenerational care.

Since its earliest days, Highland Park Hospital has been a community cornerstone committed to providing high-quality healthcare to our communities. Generations of families have entrusted us with their minor bumps and breaks and more significant medical issues. We have treated hundreds of thousands of patients with the same compassion and care with which we would treat our own family. Our commitment has only deepened as our hospital has grown. Over the years, we added a new wing and became the first hospital in Lake County to perform open-heart surgery. Then our Kellogg Cancer Center opened, providing the most comprehensive subspecialty care for oncology patients.

In 2000, Highland Park Hospital became part of NorthShore University HealthSystem. While maintaining our strong neighborhood roots and comforting ambiance, this relationship enabled us to provide our patients with access to an even greater pool of talent, resources and technology.

Today, Highland Park Hospital is a certified Primary Stroke Center. Our Lactation Consulting Program is world-renowned. Our Emergency Department serves as the region's hub for disaster response. And our acclaimed Pediatric Preparation Program helps children feel less apprehensive about their hospital stay.

Each year, more than a thousand babies open their eyes here for the very first time. It means a lot to us that we are an anchor in our Highland Park community. And we are honored that so many individuals and families choose us to safeguard their most valuable possession—their health, and the health of their families.

“We take care of our patients as though they were our own family.”

Susan Simon began her career in pediatrics in 1975 and has been the first face to greet thousands of babies. She not only loves her work, she values being part of the Highland Park Hospital team. “We apply all our skills and learn from each other. The expectation here is very high, but there is an enormous amount of support.” Patients are grateful for Highland Park Hospital's deep-seated philosophy of care. “We treat people with respect and kindness...and they remember that. Patients have returned to me years later with thanks. Highland Park Hospital memories stay with them forever.”

“I was set to deliver at a different hospital, but became seriously ill with the flu and rushed to Highland Park Hospital. It turns out I was in labor, too! Dr. Lamar Tyler was a stranger to me but treated me with such phenomenal care. My pregnancy was high-risk and I was scared. He offered to transport me to the hospital where I had planned to deliver. But he, along with an extraordinary team of nurses, made me feel so safe and nurtured that I declined the transfer.”
